As Meme Stock Mania Fizzles, Wall Street Sees 'Big Reckoning'

- The Reddit trading crowd turned Q1 of 2021 into one of the wildest periods of the stock market, and will most definitely be a topic of conversation for years to come
- Movement appears to be petering out on 37 of the popular meme stocks. Many have gone essentially unchanged over the past two months, even after soaring nearly +150% in January
- GameStop Corp. was very popular amongst retail traders but the stock's 2,460% roller coaster has caused as much pain as it did joy. The average 12-month price target implies the stock will lose more than (75%) of its value from its current status
- As the economy begins to open up, many people will resume their lives, start traveling, and stop obsessing about their Robinhood accounts. Google Trends has shown that there has been an increase in the number of searches for "Google flights" with a popularity score of 100 this week, while previously popular searches like "stock trading" and "investing" have been decreasing

Rivian Will Go Where Even Tesla Doesn't Dare

- Rivian is attempting to finish a factory, release three different vehicles, prepare for an IPO, and develop a charging network
- The CEO, R.J. Scaringe, hinted that the charging network will comprise of at least 3,500 fast chargers and at least 10,000 slower-charging points at motels and campsites. One fast charging site is expected to cost approximately $320,000, without including the maintenance and other soft costs. It is expected to be completed by 2024
- Tesla opted for a similar type of proprietary network, and currently has 9,723 fast-charging cords. However, the market has grown denser over the past 9 years. Other networks are currently holding a combined 7,589 outlets for public charging, and those are less scattered
- Rivian even plans to hand Amazon the keys to 100,000 delivery vans over the next 10 years, including 10% by the end of next year. Amazon will deploy these rigs throughout the country and utilize Rivian's new charging stations

World Economy Risks 'Dangerously Diverging' Even as Growth Booms

- The world economy is on track for its most rapid growth in more than half a century this year
- Both the U.S. and China are leading the charge, with the U.S. pumping out trillions of dollars of budgetary stimulus. While the U.S. is bouncing, countries like France, Germany, and the U.K. are contracting and emerging markets like Brazil, Russia, and India are all outpaced by China
- IMF Managing Director Kirstalina Georgieva said last week "while the outlook has improved overall, prospects are diverging dangerously"

On the bright side, the WTO predicts trade to rebound +8% in 2021 and +4% in 2022. Sources: Bloomberg, publicly available information
